ETF SECTOR ROTATION: Don't Get Stuck

- Indices, such as the S&P 500, are common benchmarks to measure your investment success. However, it is the individual sectors within these indices that drive their success or failure.
- DON'T GET STUCK: Sectors tend to outperform and underperform for prolonged periods of time. If certain sectors are in favor why be stuck with the S&P 500's pre-determined sector weighting.
- Churchill Management Group found that we can apply the same philosophy to other indexes, such as the Russell (Market Cap & Style) and International (Emerging & European Markets).
- Certain sectors perform better in defensive versus offensive time periods. For example, during the 2000—2002 Bear Market, Technology was down 80.10% versus 1999 when it was up 66.03%. ETF Sector Rotation allows you to maximize your return by overweighting your portfolio in certain sectors using exchange-traded funds. (ETFs).

According to Barron's: The formula Barron's uses to rank advisors is proprietary. The rankings are based on data provided by individual advisors and their firms. Advisor data is confirmed via regulatory databases, cross-checks with securities firms and conversations with individual advisors. The formula Barron's uses to rank advisors is proprietary. It has three major components: assets managed, revenue produced and quality of practice. Investment returns are not a component of the rankings because an advisor's returns are dictated largely by the risk tolerance of clients.
